The Gulf Stream.

An investigation of the currents of the Gulf stream during the months of April, May and June, both in 1885 and 1886, has developed the following facts, set, forth in a report of the coast and

r. The current varies daily in velo-

2. The average daily current varies moon's greatest declination, but the observations are not as yet sufficiently Maui. She has held several meetings definite to establish the exact law of this

3. The axis of the Gulf stream at the position of the greatest surface flow is eleven and a haif miles east of Fowey Rock Lighthouse. The direction is always within a few degrees of north (magnetic). The strongest surface current at the axis was five and a quarter knots, the weakest one and threequarters and the average current three and six-tenths. There was evidence that the axis of the stream did not change with current retarded the surface flow, and it is probable that the wind blowing with the current increases its velocity.
